IMC390, Internships in New Ventures

Are you struggling with the amount of work it takes to develop your start-up (for example: conducting market research, creating marketing material, investing time on social media)?

Could you use a university student spending 200 working hours this year on a project with your company?

IMC390 allows University of Toronto undergraduate students to intern with your company on various business related projects. Ideal companies are early stage science/technology based companies that are focused on creating positive change to society through innovative products/services.

Not sure if this program is a good fit for your company?
